Some interesting demonstrations will appear on the program.

An address will be delivered by E. E. Chase of Portland, President of the Maine Securities Company and a trustee of the University of Maine. Those who heard Mr. Chase at Farm and Home Week several years ago will surely welcome this opportunity to hear him again.

Before the meeting adjourns, the nominating committee will report and the officers for next year will be elected.

Plans are being made for several interesting exhibits relating to projects being carried on to be added next year.

OXFORD UNIVERSALISTS MEET AT WEST PARIS

TWO GAMES ON SCHEDULE IN WEEK

Gould Grd Stars Tackle Wilton On Saturday and South Paris Next Wednesday After School

The two big games of the year will soon be here. The undefeated Wilton Academy team will be seen in action on Saturday at two o'clock. Wilton has a 20-7 victory over Monmouth and a 7-5 victory over Norway, which team beat Edward Little 7-0. Last year Wilton and Gould met in the most thrilling game of the year, a 0-0 tie.

Gould Academy is still to be licked or scored on and they feel confident that they can hold the up-state lads enough to put over a victory. Wilton this year has two dangerous men in a 195 pound freshman tackle and 190 pound full-back.

If the Gould outfit can function as smoothly and all the men block as effectively as they did in the last game it should be a battle worth seeing. The home team realizes that it has its hands full this Saturday.

South Paris Game Wednesday

Here's the record of the fighting South Paris team, which speaks for itself. A one-sided 47-0 victory over Wells and victories over Norway. Their victory of 18-13 over Norway stamps them as a formidable foe. Last Saturday however, they further impressed the doers by completely bowling over Bridgton 27-0.

Gould Academy will have hands full trying to stop South Paris trick plays and their strong passing attack. This game will start at three o'clock.

FORMER BETHEL GIRL ON SOUTHERN TRIP

A very interesting letter and pictures were recently received by Mrs. K. J. Stearns from Mrs. L. H. Coker (nee Ruth Glines) formerly of Bethel and now of Philadelphia, who with Mr. Coker has been visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Calvin Coker of Atlanta, Ga. The trip of 2,000 miles was made by automobile. She also sent sugar cane from Georgia, pine from South Carolina, cotton from North Carolina, and tobacco from Virginia, which she picked. One of the interesting things of the trip was the mules which are used to haul cotton to the gin, and the bales to the railroad for shipment.

OBSERVES 93d BIRTHDAY

Mrs. O. M. Mason observed her ninety-third birthday as guest of honor at a birthday dinner party Monday, Oct. 16. Those present were Mrs. L. L. Mason, Donald Mason, and Mr. and Mrs. Alton Carroll.

Miss Mason was broadcast over the Cheerio Exchange for the third consecutive year.

In the afternoon Mrs. Mason entertained with piano selections. Pictures were taken.

ROOF GOING ON NEW GOULD BUILDING

As predicted in last week's issue the work of laying the gypsum planks on the roof will soon begin. The steel work will be completed this week and the two chimneys will be topped off with limestone caps. The wood framing is being put in place in the tower.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank one and all for the lovely plants, flowers, and cards which were sent me on my birthday.

The first full meeting of the Lions Club was held Tuesday evening at Bethel Inn and ladies' night was observed with an attendance of 102, including visitors from Portland, Auburn, South New Portland and Castine Lions clubs. The bell held by the local Lions since July was carried off by the Castine club, which was represented by five members. This club is located the longest distance from Bethel of any of the visiting clubs and therefore was entitled to the bell.

A banquet was served at 6:30 after which Senator Holmes of Lewiston spoke, bringing regrets from Governor Braun, who was to have been the speaker. Sam Connor of Lewiston and other visiting Lions were among the speakers, and a reading was given by Miss Ruth Leavengood of the Gould Academy faculty.

C. C. C. IMPROVES WHITE MOUNTAIN BEAUTY SPOTS

Pinkham Notch Sub-Camp of the Gilead C. C. C. Outfit Keeps Census of Visitors While Engaged in Improvement

Although the Pinkham Notch sub-camp of the 156th Company, C. C. C., was established in Darby Field at the eastern base of Mount Washington primarily to construct and maintain important hiker and ski trails up the Presidential and Carter-Moriah Ranges, members of this detachment have already beautified three scenic spots in the Notch.

The 600 foot trail from the Highway (Route 101) to Glen Ellis Falls has been completely reconstructed with stone and wooden steps added wherever necessary. During the month of August 11,300 visitors were counted using this trail. At the same time a trail to the east was taken to clear that 400 of the parties touring through the White Mountain National Forest on State Route 101 at the parking area to view the falls.

Two flights of wooden steps and an inclined bridge recently completed enable the tourist to visit Emerald Pool, one mile south of the Glen House. On account of the present accessibility, many parties visited the Pool for swimming and fishing. At Thompson Falls, also on the east 450 Star Highway, through Pinkham Notch, a picnic area has been cleared and a path is being cut to the Falls where a striking view of Mount Adams may be obtained.

The foreman in charge of widening a portion of the famous Tuckerman Ravine Trail for skiing use, kept an accurate tally of the number of hikers using this trail during the month of August. A total of 2,500 hikers passed. Other ascensions or descensions, the construction crew during working hours.

HUNTERS KILLING OR WOUNDING OTHERS LOSE RIGHT TO HUNT

Fish and Game Commissioner George J. Stobie has called attention to a hunting law amended by the last legislature to read that any person who while in the pursuit of wild game or game birds, shoots, kills or wounds a human being in mistake for game shall forever lose his right to hunt in Maine.

The law originally barred from obtaining a license any one who killed a person in mistake for game. The amendment is made to include anyone who wounded another person.

On Monday, Oct. 16, the deer season opened in Arrowsroot, Penobscot, Somerset, Piscataquis, Franklin and Oxford counties, and opens Nov. 1 in the remaining counties.

"Deer are reported about the same as in 1932 with possibly more deer in the mountain districts than last year," Commissioner Stobie said. "Hunters should be very careful before shooting at this time of year, as it is almost impossible to distinguish objects in the woods at any great distance, due to heavy foliage."

"It is quite evident from the law, as amended by the last legislature, that the legislature intended to eliminate the careless hunter. It would therefore seem, if a hunter wants to continue this sport, he should be doubly careful before shooting."

shoes and gloves, not only give a nice appearance but give warmth and comfort to the wearer and also give extra work for the manufacturer and producer. Hurrah for N. R. A.!

Sunday evening, Oct. 15 — The day is far spent and has been a most beautiful autumn day. The hills and mountains are resplendent in gala attire, and fortunate are they who are privileged to view nature's artistic masterpiece.

were in Lewiston on a shopping trip Oct. 13, and at Bryant Pond on business, Oct. 14th.

Let us one and all make a resolution to go out of doors for a few moments each day. No, don't stop to get ready, throw on a wrap and go out as often as possible. Don't sit down but move around. Look for a four leaf clover. Listen to the call of nature. It is to be found everywhere, in the air, the sunshine, in the storm. Let us all enjoy it as nature's children.

LET ME LIVE OUT MY YEARS

John G. Nelhardt

Let me live out my years in heat of blood
Let me die drunken with the dreamer's wine
Let me not see this soul-house built of mud
Go toppling to the dust—a vacant shrine!

Let me go quickly like a candle light
Snuffed out just at the heyday of its glow!
Give me high noon—and then let it be night!
Thus I would go.

And grant that when I face the aridly thing,
My song may triumph down the gray Perhaps!
Let me be as a tuneswept fiddle-string
That feels the Master Melody—and snaps.

UNSATISFIED

An old farmhouse, with meadows wide,
And sweet with clover on either side;
A bright-eyed boy, who looks from out
The door, with woodbine wreathed about,
And wishes this one thought all the day:
"Oh, if I could but fly away
From this dull spot, the world to see,
How happy, O how happy,
How happy I would be!"

Amid the city's constant din
A man who 'round the world has been;
Who, amid the tumult and the throng,
Is thinking, thinking all day long:
"Oh, could I only tread once more
The field-path to the farmhouse door,
The old, green meadows could I see,
How happy, O how happy,
How happy I would be!"

WORK THOU FOR PLEASURE

Kenyon Knox

Work thou for pleasure; paint or sing or carve
The thing thou lovest, though the body starve.
Who works for glory misses oft the goal;
Who works for money coins his very soul.
Work for work's sake then, and it will may be
That these things shall be added unto thee.

MAN OR MANIKIN

Richard Butler Glaesner

No matter whence you came, from a palace or a ditch,
You're a man, man, man, if you square yourself to life;
And no matter what they say, her- or there as you wish,
You are nothing but a husk if you alse-step strife.

For it's do, do, do, with a purpose all your own,
That makes a man a man, whether born a serf or king;
And it's loaf, loaf, loaf, lolling on a bench or throne,
That makes a being thewed to act a limp and useless thing!

No matter what you do, miracles or fruitless deeds,
You're a man, man, man, if you do them with a will;
And no matter how you loaf, cursing wealth or mumbing creeds,
You are nothing but a noise, and its weight is nil.

For it's be, be, be, champion of your heart and soul,
That makes a man a man, whether reared in silk or rags;
And it's talk, talk, talk, from a tailored shirt or stole,
That makes the image of a god a manikin that brags.

A STARTLING PHENOMENON

By D. S. BROOKS

It was a warm Autumn afternoon in the closing week of September, about two hours before sunset that I had been raking out the last of my potato crop and, feeling exhausted, sat down for a moment on the neighboring stone wall; waiting for the sun to dry the tubers before gathering them into my basket. Several gray clouds were scudding the sky and I watched them racing across the mountains on the Hanover side of the Androscoggin. I was so interested in studying and comparing the fantastic shapes ever appearing anew that I forgot "time" and the unfinished work of harvesting. Something marvelous happened. Just north of the sun, I thought, I discovered a tiny speck of something near the horizon. Moments went by; then it appeared to be a small cloud. Its rapid movement was now discernible, and it looked many times larger than at first. My attention was never before so drawn to any object. It seemed to gather momentum and came rushing at increasing speed in a course that would pass directly over my head. Its splendor held me spell-bound. A weird spell was cast over me, for I had no desire to look in any other direction. Sweetest strains of entrancing music accompanied this spectre like I anticipate is heard by the saints as their souls migrate to the ethereal world.

Who upon earth could have translated my thoughts? Was this to terminate my earthly existence? What next! Suddenly the filmy object took the shape of a throne; and one sat upon it with a crown upon his head, and a sceptre in his right hand; and close to his bosom his left hand held a long scroll. Oh, friends! I cannot find in our English language fitting words to describe that scene. I know it was Jesus! The vision was most glorious. Was He coming to take me home to Heaven, or did He have a commission for me to fulfill? Thus my thoughts leaped in my heart, but I could not speak nor make any sound. A most holy fear came upon me. I thought of the disciples upon the Mount of Transfiguration; "They feared as they entered the cloud." The cloud which bore up the throne began to descend, until I was completely overshadowed. Then an ecstasy of joy overwhelmed me. I felt that I was being carried up and away from this world. I was communing with the "King of Glory." Matters of great moment that are near at hand were communicated to me. I was told that I would be returned to earth and divinely inspired to write a book containing much that I had seen and heard from the wonderful scroll, and publish it to the world. The rest of this mighty vision I am forbidden to relate, until certain things be fulfilled in this day and generation.

I recollect from Scripture that Gideon feared after he had seen and talked with the angel; but the comforting words, "Thou shalt not die. . . . It is I, be not afraid" were assuring and majestic in their tenderness.

I want it understood that my body did not rise into the air. It "rested," just as it will when my work is accomplished and my spirit at last takes its flight to God. But my subjective self did rise into the air to meet Jesus. It was a most blessed reality. A soft touch upon my arm and my flesh revived and earthly consciousness returned. I rose to my feet and resumed my activities. I was yet living; a man among men in this world of sin. This illustrates the great Truth of the Resurrection from the dead. To my surprise the time had rolled by and the sun was setting and all the clouds had disappeared. But my heart greatly rejoices because of this experience, for I have seen Jesus; and I am a changed man.

DORIS GRAHAM had returned to spend the summer at the quiet, cliff-built summer resort where she had been so carefree and happy five years before.

"But isn't it a stupid place to live in for three months?" asked her chum in the office.

"It wouldn't suit you," admitted Doris.

"And that dreadful trip every day," commented the other girl. Doris was not to be discouraged. She wanted to get away from the city.

And so she had established herself in the plain, old country boarding house that she had lived in when her mother was with her and life looked rosy and merry.

Now, she was tired, a trifle discouraged at the lack of variety in her life. There was a vacancy she could not quite analyze, but she ascribed it to the fact that she could not get accustomed to Bethel without her dear mother.

On her first free Saturday afternoon, she wandered about the old village streets.

"I'll just go down to the post office to wait for the distribution of the late mail," she said to herself.

It was as she was entering the post office five years ago that she had first seen Archie Oldstead. The thought now quickened her breath, and that forgotten hurt straight to her heart.

What had become of him? Why had she never heard from him?

How many times she had asked herself that question only to find her self unanswerable.

She found a letter for her from the girl in the office who, secretly, would have enjoyed being with Doris, but who hesitated to invite herself.

Doris thrilled at receiving a letter from the hands of the same postmaster who had stood beside the window thumbing the letters five years before, stood beside the scratched and disfigured wall to read it.

As some one pushed against her, she moved. She bumped her head, ever so slightly, against the corner of the glass faced wall cabinet that held unclaimed letters.

For a moment she stared at the envelopes posted inside. Suddenly she stared. There was her own name—Doris Graham.

Hastily, she sought the postmaster and told him that there was a letter in the cage that was addressed to her. Together, they got it and Doris, fearing, somehow, to read it in the midst of so many eyes as were upon her at this mail hour in the village, put it in her bag.

When she was alone she opened the envelope. It was a letter from Archie. In it, he told her this was the third one he had written and if he received no answer this time he would decide that she had amused herself for a summer by making him fall in love with her.

If she wrote one letter over that week end to Archie, she wrote a dozen. None suited her. She could not seem to find words to tell him all that had been in her thought of him, since they had met. She wondered where he was. Could this address be the right one?

On Monday, at the office, she tried again, this time on her typewriter. It was a stupid letter. She destroyed it.

It was still light when she arrived in the country these June nights and she decided that she would be able to pen a short note to Archie if she used the post office pen and ink on the old shelf desk where they had written each other so many tender notes in other days. With a piece of paper in her bag, she went to the post office and wrote to Archie. As she stood looking at the much used blotter on the shelf, her handbag open with its mirror back, a familiar scrawl was reflected on it.

She held the letter over the biotol lamp. Yes, it was his name in the scrawl. Her heart thumped madly. He must be here, in this very town, now. The name had been written that day.

Putting the letter she had written, she hurried back to the boarding house.

When the motherly old landlady came forward, she saw that they had met on the walk leading through the arch of maples. She had remembered their early romance. She was gratified at its renewal.

It took the whole evening to explain the strange tricks Fate had played them during the years of their separation. But the faith of each of them was unshaken and Doris found herself later comparing the great happiness of her present summer with the shallow, frivolous gaiety of that holiday five years ago.

"And I knew all the time," Doris heard from her chum at the office, "that there must have been some good reason for your craving for that stupid summer resort—some other reason than the country air."

HENRY'S WEDDING PLAYS TO TWO PACKED HOUSES

"Henry's Wedding" is over after two night's celebration. Henry has gone on his honeymoon to parts unknown and the town is still talking about the big wedding.

"Henry's Wedding," the three-act comedy play which was presented at the Grange Hall Monday and Tuesday nights proved an outstanding success. Both nights the hall was crowded to capacity.

Much credit is due to all who took part, and it would be almost impossible to pick any favorites. The cast of characters deserve honorable mention. The colored variety singing quartet, during old time Southern melodies was well received. The poppy chorus girls sang and danced their way to every one's delight throughout the show. The Beans and Belles of the Gay Nineties, made up of the business men of the town, proved great favorites both nights.

All in all, "Henry's Wedding" proved entertaining to all who witnessed it. Miss Ysobel MacGangler, who coached the play, was presented a beautiful leather pocket-book by the Bethel Grange on Tuesday evening. The proceeds of the play are for the benefit of the Bethel Grange.

Two women had a narrow escape from death Friday afternoon, when their car was thrown onto a railroad crossing at Lewiston in front of a train. Their car was stopped about 20 feet from the track, when a car with defective brakes rammed the car directly onto the crossing.
